Use ‘Em, Don’t Lose ‘Em

Attention: Students with Spring meal plans! Block Plan PILOT PROGRAM

Have you ever had a week so busy that you couldn’t eat all your meals? Or a week where you were really working hard and could use more meals? Here is your chance to try a program where your meals don’t “expire” at the end of the week, but you can use them any time over a four-week period!

WHO can volunteer?

If you have a current meal plan contract for Spring Semester, you are invited to volunteer for a four-week block plan pilot program.

HOW will it work?

During the pilot period, you will be able to use your weekly allotment of meals, times 4, anytime during the four week pilot period. You can use them as quickly or as spread out as you wish. At the end of the four-week pilot program, any meals not used will be lost.

- If you are on a 5 meals per week plan, you will have 20 meals to use anytime over the four weeks.
- If you are on a 10 meals per week plan, you will have 40 meals to use anytime over the four weeks.
- If you are on a 15 meals per week plan, you will have 60 meals to use anytime over the four weeks.

Please note that you are in charge of how you want to use your meal allowance and that may mean that you run out of meals before the four weeks is up. You could use your flex dollars in that situation, or are always able to purchase more flex dollars if you run out.

WHAT ELSE do I need to know?

The rest of the normal rules to meal plans apply:
- one entry to the Commons counts for one meal
- one-meal-per-week allowed at Nabo
- use of the semester flex dollars associated with your plan

WHEN?

Four weeks starting Sunday, March 22 and ending Saturday, April 18, 2015. If you wish to volunteer for this pilot program, you must participate the entire four weeks.

WHY?

Results from a dining services survey done in November, 2013, told us some students were interested in a meal block plan where they could use their allotted meals over a period longer than one week.
