AUGSBURG UNIVERSITY

WE ARE THE ONES
WE HAVE BEEN WAITING FOR:
TRANSFORMING SOCIAL WORK PRACTICE

Social workers have long worked to create positive change, and yet our profession has also been at the center of perpetuating great harm. Author Alice Walker wrote, "The colonizing mind invites itself wherever it wishes to intrude; it is a worthwhile practice for the coming millennium to train ourselves away from such a mind." We must do things differently, and it must start with our own practices.

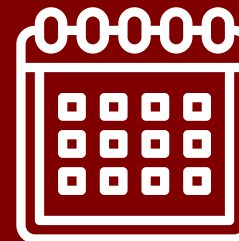

Join us as we hear from Augsburg University alumni, who are engaged in new and exciting initiatives that push social work and push up against social work to meet its call to address systemic issues and create transformative practices.
